To the grofs claps of a lascivious Moor. Shak. Othello.
All night he will pursue; but his approach
Darkness defends beyond, till morning watch.
The latter watch of wafting night,
And setting stars, to kindly sleep invite. Dryden's Æn.
9. A pocket-clock; a small clock moved by a spring.
A watch, besides the hour of the day, gives the day of the month, and the place of the sun in the zodiac. Hale.
On the theatre we are confined to time; and though we talk not by the hour-glass, yet the watch often drawn out of the pocket warns the actors that their audience is weary. Dryd.
That Cloe may be serv'd in state,
The hours must at her toilet stand;
Whilst all the reasoning fools below
Wonder their watches go so slow. Prior.
To WATCH, v. n. [pactian, Saxon.]
1. Not to sleep; to wake.
I have two nights watch'd with you; but can perceive no

gent observation.
The experience of our own frailties, and the consideration of the watchfulness of the tempter, discourage us. Hammond.
Love, fantastick pow'r! that is afraid
To stir abroad 'till watchfulness be laid;
Undaunted then o'er cliffs and valleys flays,
And leads his vot'ries fate through pathless ways. Prior.
Husbands are counselled not to trust too much to their wives owning the doctrine of unlimited conjugal fidelity; and so to neglect a due watchfulness over their manners. Arbutnot.
Prejudices are cured by a constant jealousy and watchfulness over our passions, that they may never interpose when we are called to pass a judgment.
By a solicitous watchfulness about one's behaviour, instead of being mended, it will be contrained.
2. Inability to sleep.
Watchfulness, sometimes called a coma vigil, often precedes too great sleepiness.

— That we have, sir John: our watchword, hem, boys. Shak.
A watchword every minute of the night goeth about the walls, to testify their vigilancy. Saunders.
WATER, n. f. [water, Dutch; pæccer, Saxon.]
1. Sir Isaac Newton defines water, when pure, to be a very fluid salt, volatile, and void of all flavour or taste; and it seems to consist of small, smooth, hard, porous, spherical particles, of equal diameters, and of equal specific gravities, as Dr.
Cheyne observes; and also that there are between them spaces so large, and ranged in such a manner, as to be pervious on all sides. Their smoothness accounts for their sliding easily over one another's surfaces: their sphericity keeps them by from touching one another in more points than one; and by both these their frictions in sliding over one another, is rendered the least possible. Their hardness accounts for the in-compressibility of water, when it is free from the intermixture of air. The porosity of water is so very great, that there is at least forty times as much space as matter in it; for water is nineteen times specifically lighter than gold, and consequently rarer in the same proportion. Quincy.

My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears. Shak. H. VI.
Your water is a fore-dcayer of your whorlous dead body.
The sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me, which I would have stopp'd,
But I had not so much of man in me;
But all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears. Shak. Henry V.
Men's evil manners live in brafs, their virtues
We write in water. Shak. Henry VIII.
Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon:
here's that which is too weak to be a finner, honest water, which ne'er left man i' th' mire. Shak. Timon.
Water is the chief ingredient in all the animal fluids and solids; for a dry bone, distilled, affords a great quantity of in-spid water: therefore water seems to be proper drink for every animal. Arbutnot on Aliments.
2. The sea.
Travel by land or by water.
By water they found the sea, westward from Peru, always very calm. Abbott's Description of the World.
3. Urine.

'Tis a good form,
And rich: here is a water, look ye. Shak. Timon.
6. WATER is much used in composition for things made with water, being in water, or growing in water.
She might see the same water-spaniel, which before had hunted, come and fetch away one of Philoclea's gloves, whose fine proportion shew'd well what a dainty guest was wont
there to be lodged. Sidney.
Oh that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the fun of Bolingbroke,
And melt myself away in water-drops. Shak. Henry VI.
Poor Tom eats the wall-newt, and the water-newt. Shak.
Touch me with noble anger!
O let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. Shak. King Lear.
Let not the water-flood overflow me.
They shall spring up as among the grafs, as willows by the water-courses. Pf. lxxix. 15.
As the hart panteth after the water-brook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. Pf. xlv. 4.
Deep calleth unto deep, at the noise of thy water-spouts.
He turneth rivers into a wilderness, and the water-springs into dry ground. Pf. xlii. 7.
There were set six water-pots of stone.
Hercules's page, Hylas, went with a water-pot to fill it at a pleasant fountain that was near. Bacon's Natural History.

the roach is accounted the water-sneak. Walton's Angler.
Sea-calves unwonted to fresh rivers fly;
The water-snakes with scales upstanding die. Moy's Virgil.
By making the water-wheels larger, the motion will be so slow, that the screw will not be able to supply the outward streams. Willkins's Dædalus.
Rain carried away apples, together with a dunghill that lay in the water-course. L'Estrange.
Oh help, in this extremest need,
If water-gods are deities indeed. Dryden.
The water-snake, whom fish and paddocks feed,
With staring scales lies poison'd in his bed. Dryd. Virgil.
Because the outermost coat of the eye might be pick'd, and this humour let out, therefore nature hath made provision to repair it by the help of certain water-pipes, or lymphaducts, inserted into the bulb of the eye, proceeding from glandules that separate this water from the blood. Ray on the Creation.
The Lucerna aquatica, or water-newt, when young, hath four near ramified fins, two on one side, growing out a little above its forelegs; to poise and keep its body upright, which fall off when the legs are grown. Derham's Physico-Theology.
Other mortar used in making water-courses, cisterns, and fishponds, is very hard and durable. Moxon.
The most brittle water-carriage was used among the Egyptians, who, as Strabo faith, would sail sometimes in boats made of earthen ware. Arbutnot.
A gentleman watered St. fin in dry weather at new sowing, and when it came up, with a water-cart, carrying his water in a cask, to which there was a tap at the end, which lets the water run into a long trough full of small holes. Morr.
In Hampshire they sell water-trefoil as dear as hops. Morr.

To WATER, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To irrigate; to supply with moisture.
A river went out of Eden to water the garden. Gen. ii. 10.
A man's nature runs to herbs or weeds; therefore let him seasonably water the one, and destroy the other. Bacon.
Chaste moral writing we may learn from hence,
Neglect of which no wit can recompense; some do
The fountain which from Helicon proceeds, and some
That sacred stream, should never water weeds. Waller.
Could tears water the lovely plant, so as to make it grow again after once 'tis cut down, your friends would be so far from accusing your passion, that they would encourage it, and share it. Temple.
You may water the lower land when you will. Motimer.
2. To supply with water for drink.
Now 'gan the golden Phebus for to sleep
His fiery face in billows of the west,

watered silk, does the like. Locke.
To WATER, v. n.
1. To shed moisture.
I stain'd this napkin with the blood;
That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point Made issue from the bosom of the boy; and when
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal. Shak. Henry VI.
Mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Shak. Julius Cæsar.
The tickling of the nostrils within, doth draw the moisture to the nostrils, and to the eyes by consent; for they also will water. Bacon's Natural History.
How troublesome is the least mote, or dust falling into the eye! and how quickly does it weep, and water upon the least grievance! South's Sermons.
2. To get or take in water; to be used in supplying water.
He set the rods he had pulled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs. Gen. xxx. 38.
Mahomet sent many small boats, manned with harquebusiers and small ordnance, into the lake near unto the camp, to keep the Christians from watering there. Knolles.
3. The mouth WATERS. The man longs; there is a vehement desire. From dogs who drop their slaver when they see meat which they cannot get.
Cardinal Wolsey's teeth watering at the bishoprick of Winchester, sent one unto bishop Fox, who had advanced him, for to move him to resign the bishoprick, because extreme age had made him blind; which motion Fox did take in fo ill part, that he willed the messenger to tell the cardinal, that, although now I am blind, I have espied his malicious unthankfulness.
These reasons made his mouth to water,
With amorous longings to be at her. Hudibras.
I hope who contend for 4 per cent. have set men's mouths
a-watering for money at that rate. Locke.
WATERCOLOURS, n. f. [water and colour.]
Painters make colours into a soft consistence with water or oil; those they call watercolours, and these they term oilcolours.
Lest should I dawb it o'er with transitory praise,
And watercolours of these days:
These days! where e'en th' extravagance of poetry
Is at a loss for figures to express
Men's folly, whimsies, and inconstancy. Swift.
WATERCRESS, n. f. [Hyssyrium, Latin.] A plant.
It hath a flower composed of four leaves, which are placed in form of a cross, out of whose empalement rises the pointal, which afterward becomes a fruit or pod, which is divided into two cells by an intermediate partition, to which the valves adhere on both sides, and furnished with seeds which are round-ish. To these marks must be added, that the whole appearance of the plant is peculiar to the species of this genus. There are five species. Miller.
